

ALoke CHAKRAVARTY

Aloke Chakravarty is an Assistant U.S. Attorney for the District of Massachusetts. Over the past 15 years, Aloke has been a prosecutor in different contexts -- as an Assistant District Attorney in Middlesex County, in the Criminal Division of the Massachusetts Attorney General's Office, for the U.S. Department of Justice, and for the United Nations at the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia. Aloke also served in Washington, D.C. as Assistant General Counsel at the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and as Attorney-Advisor at the Justice Department's Office of Intelligence Policy and Review.

Although he currently focuses on cases involving national security and human rights, he has prosecuted and otherwise investigated matters across the criminal spectrum, including juvenile justice, violent crime, drug and gun offenses, white collar crime, public corruption, and organized crime. Aloke has also participated in preventative, diversionary and rehabilitative efforts and regularly leads outreach activities in the District. He has received the Massachusetts Bar Association's Access to Justice Award and the Attorney General's Award for Distinguished Service. Aloke is a graduate of the Johns Hopkins University and Emory Law School.